Observation station

Description of the good practice

It was noted that sometimes the point for completing the observation cards is located in the office area and this can be some way from the worksite. By introducing a reporting station out on site encourages the use of the observation cards with this intent that more shall be produced at the work face where the observations are seen.

What are the benefits?

Allows individuals to get access to and complete observation cards out of site therefore promoting their use and gaining more data to add to the Close Call system.

Are there any drawbacks?

None – needs to be sheltered and be in a position of safety
